The Spring Months

Are most likely to find your blood impure and itching in the red eruptions which enable it to carry nourishment to the nerve and other organs. Therefore you feel weak, tired and listless, and are troubled with spring humors. Relief is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood.

Hood's Pills cure biliousness. Mailed for 25 cents by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

London anarchists bravely assert that they are responsible for the explosion of the Tonkin arsenal.

The Cruel Knife!

It is absolutely useless to expect a surgical operation to cure cancer, or any other blood disease. The cruelty of such treatment is illustrated in the alarming number of deaths which result from it. The disease is in the blood, and hence can not be cut out. Nine times out of ten the surgeon's knife only hastens death.

We saw a man with a malignant cancer, for which the doctors said an operation was the only hope. The operation was performed, and the cancer disappeared entirely, and he was cured. The cure was a permanent one, for he is now seventy years old and has never had a sign of the dreadful disease to return.

Absolutely the only hope for Cancer is Swift's Specific.

as it is the only remedy which goes to the very bottom of the blood and forces out every trace of the disease. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable, and contains no potash, mercury, or other mineral.

"Sheep Killed—Now Kill the Dogs."

MR. EDITORS:—The above heading appeared in your paper last week. Of course you intended it as a timely suggestion to the farmers. For below the head lines you recorded the fact that Mr. Joe C. Turley had just sustained a severe loss by sheep-killing dogs. Your good-natured suggestion is along the line of the one often heard, "kill the stable after the horse is stolen," and this has often happened. And how often have we seen farmers indifferent as to dogs till their flocks of valuable sheep were depleted by them some dark night. Then they arise, full of anger, and proceed to canvass the neighborhood in search of a sheepish-looking dog with wool in his teeth. Finding the suspect, the farmer, chafing under his heavy financial loss, feels that the life of the dog must make amends for his dead sheep. But his neighbor is not so confident that his dog did the dirty work, and being fond of his daily companion, insists that his valuable life must not be sacrificed. A quarrel ensues, a life or two is sacrificed, and estrangements follow that never end. Is the picture overdrawn? Not at all. Then why not follow a suggestion somewhat like this: Kill the dogs—keep the sheep. I was raised on a farm and have never ceased to take a deep interest in agricultural pursuits. When the farmer prospers I rejoice, when he is unfortunate I am sorry. But there is one thing that I have often considered seriously and long, and that is why farmers will persist in keeping a lot of worthless dogs when the sheep growing interest is constantly in jeopardy and frequently rendered worse than profitless.

Sheep are valuable to the farmer and to the public in many ways. Dogs, as a rule, are utterly without value to anybody; they are consumers, never producers for the general good, but often a most destructive element to one of the most profitable branches of farming. I am strongly convinced there ought to be a change. If farmers are the only people in this country who can bring it about. Then why can they not arise, organize, and say, let the beautiful young ladies who feel inclined to themselves to one end of a chain and the ugly pug-nosed dog to the other, but as for us we will exterminate the worthless animals from the land and save our sheep and increase our profits? FORCES IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Dewey Has Nineteen Men-of-War—Otis Has 24,500 Soldiers.

Forty-one thousand officers and men of the combined army and navy forces comprise the approximate total American strength now at, en route and under orders for service in the Philippine Islands. No further reinforcements are now in contemplation. The forces of the two services already stationed in and about the archipelago consist of twenty regiments of infantry, one engineer battalion, seven troops of cavalry and eleven batteries of artillery, an aggregate of about 24,500 men. Nineteen vessels, with an aggregate of 207 officers, 2,900 men and 253 marines make up the naval contingent. This is exclusive of the transport Solace, with 102 officers and men, all told, which is constantly passing back and forth from Manila, making at rapid progress as possible, and there are nearly 7,500 men in the force under orders to proceed to the Philippines.

Corastalk Disease.

It has been pretty clearly shown that stockmen can prevent loss from this trouble by feeding a grain ration and not allowing animals to live on corastalk alone.

DR. TALMAGE
Resigns the Pastorate of His Church at Washington.

Dr. T. Dewitt Talmage, who has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Washington, for nearly four years past, has tendered his resignation. The explanation made in his letter is as follows:

"The increasing demands made upon me by religious journalism and the continuous calls for more general work in cities have of late years caused frequent interruptions in my pastoral work. It is not right that this condition should further continue. It is besides desirable that I have more opportunity to meet in religious assemblies those to whom I have, through the printing press, been permitted to preach week by week, and without the exception of a week for about thirty years. Therefore, though very reluctantly, I have concluded after serving you nearly four years in the pastoral relation, to send this letter of resignation."

It is the intention of Dr. Talmage to continue his residence in Washington. He will devote most of his time to literary pursuits.

GETTING AMERICANIZED.

Great Britain to Introduce Competition in the Telephone Service.

The welcome announcement was made by the Financial Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. R. W. Hanbury, in the House of Commons last week that the British Government had decided to introduce competition in the telephone service of that country. He asked for a credit of 100,000,000 as a starter in order to enable the Post-office Department to develop the telephone communication of London.

In making the announcement Mr. Hanbury admitted that it was a notable fact that Great Britain was far behind the United States and other countries in the matter of telephone communication.

The House ultimately adopted a resolution embodying Mr. Hanbury's proposal.

SITTING ANGEL.
Design for Winnie Davis' Statue at Richmond Selected.

The design for the statue to be erected in Hollywood, Richmond, Va., over the grave of Miss Winnie Davis, the daughter of the Confederacy, has been chosen and approved by Mrs. Davis. The design, which is by Zolpe, of New York, is the figure of a sitting angel. It is to be of Italian marble, and will be erected by the Daughters of the Confederacy.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours, a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding painful pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant secret of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents or one dollar.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. If you send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure and mention that you read this generous offer in the Mt. Sterling Advocate.

OLD MEMORANDUM BOOK

Found Giving Names of Heretofore Unknown Confederate Dead.

Henry C. Gant, President of the Bank of Hopkinsville, found in an old bank desk last week a memorandum book belonging to George K. Anderson, of Cotton Gin, Tex., which discloses the names of the 101 heretofore unknown Confederate dead whose bodies are buried around the magnificent monument unveiled in Hopkinsville May 1, 1898, erected by John C. Latham, of New York, at a cost of $14,000. The exact location of each grave with name, rank, and regiment of each soldier is given. The dead soldiers belonged to the First and Third Mississippi, Seventh Texas, Eighth Kentucky regiments and Fore's cavalry.

Insurance Companies Withdraw.

As a result of the fight against the insurance companies in this district, eighteen of the old companies have withdrawn from Franklin county, and eight companies have withdrawn from Woodford county, and have notified their agents not to write any more insurance. Other companies have signified their intention of withdrawing from the State.

The Imperial Insurance Company, of London, represented by Forman & Parish, has withdrawn from business in this city, and other agents are expecting some of their companies to withdraw from business in this city.

The Clark county grand jury indicted nearly all the fire insurance companies doing business in Winchester for conspiring to fix rates of insurance.—Bourbe News.

SOME FACTS

In Regard to Wide Tires on Wagons

FOR FARM AND ROAD USE.

Read of the Various Experiences of Various Tests.

The Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station made a series of tests extending from January, 1896, to September, 1897, in order to thoroughly and scientifically ascertain the value of wide tires as compared with narrow ones. They were made with two wagons, one with 6-inch tires, the other with standard 14-inch tires, both wagons of the same weight, and each loaded with 3,000 pounds. It was found that the same power needed to draw the narrow tired wagon, with its 2,000-pound load, on a gravel road, would have pulled a load of 2,482 pounds on the wide tired wagon. The same power required to draw the 2,000-pound load on narrow tires over dirt and gravel roads when these were dry and hard, was found sufficient to draw a 2,530-pound load on the wide tired wagon under the same conditions; and it was shown that when these roads were deep with mud, but partly dried at the surface by a few hours' sun, the same power required to draw the 2,000-pound load over them on the narrow tires, would pull a load of 3,200 pounds on the wide tires.

Director Waters, of the Station, states that the conditions under which the narrow tires offer an advantage over the wide ones, "are unusual and of short duration," and that "through a majority of days in the year, and at times when the dirt roads are most used, and when their use is most imperative, the broad tired wagon will pull materially lighter than the narrow tired wagon."

He states "that a large number of tests on meadows, pastures, stubble land, corn ground, and plowed in every condition, from dry, hard and firm to very wet and soft, show without a single exception a large difference in draft in favor of the broad tires. This difference ranged from 17 to 120 per cent."

As a result of all experiments conducted, he says "it appears that six inches is the best width of tire for a combination farm and road wagon, and that both axes should be the same length, so that the front and hind wheels will run in the same track."

Experiments made at the Agricultural Experiment Station in Utah have demonstrated that 14-inch tired wagon drew about 40 per cent heavier than one with 3-inch tires, and weighing with its load, the same as the other.

At the Ohio State University it was shown that a wagon with 3-inch tires and loaded with 4,480 pounds, could easily be hauled by two horses over an ordinary dirt road in good condition and with a hard surface, while with a narrow tire half as much was a full load for a double team.

The principle of wide tires is so generally acknowledged in Europe that laws have been passed in each country prescribing their use. Austria requires tires of at least 4-1/2 inches width, increasing as the load to be carried rises above 35 tons. In France, all freighting and market wagons are turned into road rollers by being required to have tires from 3 to 10 inches wide. Germany requires 4-inch tires for all wagons used for heavy loads, and Switzerland requires that they shall be provided with tires of six inches. These regulations have been adopted for the protection of the high-class European roads built during the present century.

THE TAKING OF HUMAN LIFE.

The taking of human life, except by legal enactment, is one of, if not the greatest crimes which darken the lives and mar the happiness of men. Through the ages restrictions have been placed upon men that they should properly estimate the value of life and thus prevent its reckless destruction.

While legislation has been partially effective in restraining the evil passions, there is still need, even in the most refined and enlightened communities, that warning and admonition should be given.

The social standing of the victim of the deadly knife and pistol does not mitigate the crime; it does not change the motive or intent of the would be slayer. Social connection, political prominence and money have turned loose upon communities men who have been ever ready to wound or kill those who have offended, or who have, it may be, unintentionally interfered with others.

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," should be guaranteed to all—white or black, rich or poor, high or low.

WANT SUNDAY DRINKS.

The liquor dealers of Lexington propose to have settled permanently the constitutionality of the Sunday law as pertains to their business. There have been many indictments, nearly 100 for offending against this law. Mr. W. C. Bronston and Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge represent the saloonist, and have given notice that the case will be taken to Court of Appeals for final settlement. Six days the people of Lexington have said the saloonists may sell their intoxicating, demoralizing beverages, and having done this much for them, the saloonists now demand that the first day of the week—Sunday—be added, giving them all the time. There are seven days in a week and 24 hours in a day. The church-going and moral element are giving their influence towards the enforcing of the Sunday Law.

TALKING THROUGH HIS HAT.

Editor Squire Turner of the Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat told a Cincinnati Enquirer man that he is still satisfied that Senator Goebel will be nominated and elected with ease. He will carry that county (Montgomery) in fact all of the Tenth Congressional District.—Stanford Interior Journal.

The editor of the Sentinel-Democrat was talking through his hat. We have nothing to say about what Montgomery county will do, but out of the 2,200 Democrats in Clark County, there are, so far as we have been able to ascertain, less than a dozen of them for Mr. Goebel, and Wat Hardin will carry this county overwhelmingly. As to the Tenth District, of which we are part, we will go upon record now as a political prophet, from what we know of it, and we think we know something about it, that Mr. Goebel will stand no more chance of carrying this district than a "jay bird."—Winchester Sun.

DRY.

The Council gave special notice last week that the Sunday law would be enforced, and so far as we are able to ascertain, it was strictly observed. It is said some of the Sunday drinkers got very thirsty before Monday morning, and it is believed that if the Sunday law is strictly complied with, water works will carry by a safe majority the next time that question comes up for consideration.

If the Louisville Dispatch officers have been true to the stockholders, why suppress any facts in connection with the management? Why not bring the books into court and demand an investigation? The very conduct of these officers, who claim to be in accord with the Democratic party and who have voted against all its principles in State, District and National conflicts, thereby aiding in the defeat of Democracy, is proof of falsity the trust imposed in them.

Because the parties contending with those officers of the Louisville Dispatch represent a small amount of stock, their officers are striving by technical methods to close their mouths and keep back the real condition of affairs. Too late they, for the stockholders are even now apprised of the fact that there is more than one Judas in their camp. The Democratic party contends for the rights of individual, whether they be of large or small holdings, and a stockholder has the right to investigate and correct irregularities even though he may represent only fractional parts of a share. For the purpose of promulgating Democratic doctrines, of protecting alike the weak and the strong, the Dispatch was organized, but alas, it has fallen into different lists; it has been betrayed by those in position.

The Dispatch must be redeemed. It can be and will be if once returned to its owners. Strictly in accord with the Democratic principles it was launched, preferring party, and party measures to rule. Far short of this Democratic rule it has fallen. The parties now in charge having turned it with all its power and influence against the party that gave it existence. The Democratic party is the opponent of trusts, combines and monopolies of every character, and yet it is in proof that it is now the creature of a monopoly that dictates its policy.

We are not blind to facts. Everything is not going to the bad, even if some of the saloons, in violation of law, carry on their business on Sunday. There is much that is commendable in our town. While we appreciate and encourage this we expect to speak out against the evil.

Now, let the saloons be kept closed on Sunday.

THE DISPATCH.

FOLLY OF ITS OFFICERS.

Evidence Admitted By Examiner

Clarence Walker.

Mr. Allen R. Carter was arrested and brought before Examiner Walker. He did not want to talk, but finally said $6,500 was taken by an employee in his commission firm without his knowledge or consent; that he (Carter) paid the money, and that for private reasons bonds were placed this way.

Now, if Mr. Carter wanted to be fair with the Dispatch Company, why did he not deal with them openly? Carter is the company's servant and should have no business secrets from them pertaining to the company's business.

Other questions pertaining to the condition of the Dispatch and a request for the books, Carter refused, and was fined $5.00 and ordered to jail for five hours. This matter was referred to Judge Miller and comes before him to-day, together with demurrers, etc., pending which the following gave depositions:

Mr. J. T. Lee, superintendent of city circulation, testified that in October last Col. Deitzman, business manager, told him that John H. Whalen would see that he have an opportunity to solicit subscribers from the L. & N. employees; that Whalen was an agent for the L. & N., and was interested in the Dispatch to the extent that he would do what he could for it. Before the bond issue Carter said the paper was losing money; said the paper could not antagonize the L. & N. because it was friendly to the Dispatch; Whalen's name was known as Miller and after as Porter in office, and he conferred with Carter and Deitzman frequently. Carter said the fate of the Dispatch would be the same as that of the Nashville Sun; L. & N. would get control and either stop it or use it in its own interest.

What do the Democrats and stockholders of the Dispatch think of that? They put up $33,000 for the Dispatch and are liable for as much more, $66,000 in all, elected Carter President who confers with L. & N. agent and then admits it will finally go into the hands of political foes.

Mr. W. L. Lippold was next to testify. He has been bookkeeper for ten months, until February 1, 1899, when business manager Deitzman (Rep.) asked for his resignation; had made up many statements, and was familiar with its financial condition. Mr. Deitzman made the following statement, marked A:

Stock issued.....	$39,439 49
Less paid employees in stock.....	6,555 00
Cash stock.....	$32,884 49
Cost of organization.....	$ 5,000 00
Paid rent.....	8,000 00
Posta rent.....	4,550 00
Bent three machines.....	1,500 00
Postage, clerk hire, correspondence, exp. collecting stock.....	200 00
Cavansing for additional stock.....	1,500 00
Total.....	221,50 00

From December, 1897, to December, 1898, twelve months, the Dispatch lost $15,501.33; the smallest loss in a month was $72.00 and the largest $4,488.78.

If Mr. Carter had been true to the stockholders, who made him president, would he not have called a halt and referred the matter of losses to them? The Dispatch had opportunities unequalled by any paper. Why this failure, these losses?

When he left, February 1, the company owed paper company $8,000. Some notes had gone to protest. In addition they owed $10,000.

He filed a statement showing the company owed $20,641.12.

Carter said the L. & N. would put up $20,000 to defeat Goebel with; that the Dispatch would receive $10,000 of this amount, which would put it in good shape; the financial condition of the Dispatch was bad and it was with trouble pay rolls were met; about $1,500 of paper went to protest; accounts on books went to Carter for money put up and for indorsements on paper; Carter was endorser for the company for about $20,000; indebtedness when he left was $31,000; Carter did not care what became of the Dispatch after defeat of Goebel; employees were paid in part in stock.

They converted it into cash and it was sold from $4 to $7 per share. Deitzman made statement to the stockholders when the bond issue was proposed. One he made was not true. Deitzman put the liabilities at one-half, which aggregated $16,000; assets at $18,000. They were not correct; made statement a few days after and liabilities were $32,000. In the assets he included $15,000 bad accounts; not more than 20 per cent, can be collected, and Carter would be satisfied with $5,000 collected out of $15,000.

So it seems from the proof, that the statement of the company's financial condition before the stockholders was not correct.

Mr. D. H. Ham also testified that Carter had informed him that the company was in bad shape and advised him to buy no more stock. Carter bought Ham's stock. What for is another question. Mr. Ham went to Chicago to try to arrange to keep Dispatch out of the hands of the L. & N. Enloe was confident that Deitzman and Whalen would get the paper. Enloe could not put on breaks; new board was appointed and a demand was made for Enloe to fight Goebel. Enloe's evidence was to the effect that the L. & N. put up money for company to defeat Goebel. Carter and Stewart took Whalen's advice. Dispatch was insolvent when he left it. Carter's statement to directors was not correct. Bonds were authorized under misrepresentation.

The motto of the founders of the Dispatch was the adhering to principle rather than individuals, but in this day it is very changed and is individual in preference to Democratic measures, for we see the Hon. P. Wat Hardin, candidate for Governor, is the Dispatch's candidate, regardless of any doctrines to which he may adhere. It has been publicly stated that Mr. Hardin is the L. & N. R. R. candidate for Governor as is also the Dispatch the L. & N. organ.

Messrs Stone and Goebel each have friends and interests in the Dispatch, but under the present management, neither they nor their friends are represented. The Dispatch is an instrument in the hands of their enemy to do them harm, and would be injurious were it not that temper had been taken from its blade.

If The Dispatch is true to the party that gave it birth and the stockholders who own it, why doesn't Mr. Carter, the President under whose management it is, order a call meeting, lay the grievances of Democrats before them, prove himself innocent of charges against his management and turn the paper over to them to do with as they choose? This is the way true men who prize their character more than dollars, act.

If Mr. Carter is losing money for the Dispatch, why not give it into other hands that they may make it a success; a power for the Democratic party?

Already more than sixty bimetallic papers in the State of Kentucky have spoken out in censure of the course pursued by the Louisville Dispatch, viz: Running at a loss of from $1300 to $1400 per month and allying itself with monopolistic interests, in direct opposition to Democratic doctrines. No Democrat, who respects the principles of his party, can or will endorse the Dispatch under its present management.

The District Conference of the Methodist church will meet here May 9th to 12th.

Rev. D. G. Combs on Saturday returned from Clay City where he held a meeting with 29 additions.

R. M. and B. W. Trimble and John C. Wood were shaking hands with our people. They are candidates for public patronage and the Railroad Commissionership.

A protracted meeting began at the Christian church on Sunday. Rev. Combs preached until Monday night. Rev. J. T. Hawkins, of Lexington, will arrive on Tuesday and conduct the meeting.

Circuit Court convened yesterday at 1 o'clock. Judge Cooper on the bench. W. A. Young was present to represent the Commonwealth. After a comprehensive and forcible instruction to the grand jury the court adjourned. The weather was pleasant and the attendance was large. There was evidence that there had been war, the boys in blue were present. J. H. Williams, of Frenchburg and A. T. Wood, of Mt. Sterling were in attendance.

Every Path Hath a Puddle.

The puddle in the pathway of most lives is a defective circulation due to a blood supply that instead of growing clear and strong like a mountain brook, is stagnant and impure. Puddles may be purified, however, and become limpid streams. That is what Hood's Sarsaparilla does with human blood.

It clarifies, purifies and strengthens the blood, and when this is accomplished, the vital organs, liver, lungs, kidneys, bowels, are all braced and invigorated. It never disappoints.

Dyspepsia.—Suffered everything but death for years with dyspepsia. Nothing relieved me until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it made me well. I can eat anything. I wish I could tell Mr. W. H. Mearns, Hull, Danbury, Conn.

Impure Blood.—I suffered with pimples on face and body. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me permanently. It secured my father's card. Address: E. C. Hunt, Tulsa, Okla.

Erysipelas.—I was stricken in now and then on account of Hood's Sarsaparilla curing my erysipelas and eczema. It is our family medicine. Address: Mrs. H. O. Wheatley, Fort Chester, N. Y.

OUR WAR WITH SPAIN.

Yes, brother, we have lately had a little affair with Spain.

To help the struggling Cubans
And to avenge the sunken Maine.

First, we captured the Philippine Islands.
Then took Porto Rico, Spain.

Then the look of the Spaniards
Became most intense blue.

Then we tackled him of the Cuban coast
And we sunk all of his little toys.

We bombarded, we routed him,
And we made a fearful noise.

We chased him o'er Cuban tobacco fields,
Till finally we upstaged him.

Then Uncle Sammy jumped him,
And, my gracious, how he whipped him.

Yes, he whopped him around in the dust,
And he rolled him in the sand.

Then helped him up and brushed him off
Then he took him by the hand.

We hired ships and conveyed him home,
To his own beloved Spain.

With a warning not to try it
With his Uncle Sam again.

Then, in a spirit of generosity,
As a recompense for his little Spain.

Thrust twenty millions in his pocket
To prevent his things kicking.

Thus to even things up all around
The honors all to Uncle Sam.

While the profits came the Spaniard's way
In this insignificant little muss.

Good Winter Butter.

When the milk has been strained
Heat it till it cracks on top, then place where it is cool, but will not freeze. When enough for a churning skin it and place the cream pot by the stove or other warm place to ripen. Churn with a temperature of 58 degrees. If the quantity of milk is small, it is better to churn all the milk than to keep it over three days.

As to butter and buttermilk will be better the milk is too old. That the butter is good is shown by the fact that our customers take it preference to creamery butter at the same price. These suggestions are given for those farmers' wives who do not have scientific appliances.

HUNTING NEAR SANTIAGO.

Plenty of Quail and Deer—Good Fishing in the Harbor.

As a member of the Sir Thomas Lipton war relief committee it was my fortune to pass about a fortnight in Santiago harbor, and I employed a portion of my time in looking up the game and fish. On either side of the Yellow Fever island there come in two small rivers, navigable in canoes for about five miles, when we reach the lofty mountains. The water is cool and clear, and quantities of fine fish could be seen. None were taken by our party, on account of the lack of tackle. The bushy shores contained snipe, quail and guinea fow in abundance. No sharks were visible, but the air was dark with buzzards around about the city. The hunters all said that the buzzards did no harm to the game birds or their eggs, but were merely scavengers. The water of the harbor is pretty sluggish, and the bottom is covered deep with grey mud, but the sailors managed to catch some fish one day, including a big snapper, which was served in the captain's cabin and pronounced excellent. In the harbors of San Juan, Ponce and Santiago the game seemed fairly swarmed. These fish ran from one to three feet in length. At night there were many large fish about, judging from the splashing.

One day a party of us, including Capt. Alexander, of the rough riders, went to San Juan hill on horseback, as there was no road in that part of the country. While the captain was trying to find the body of a Capt. "Buck" O'Neill, of Prescott, A. T., one of his comrades who had fallen there, the rest of us wandered around in the male trails, now nearly obliterated and grown up to bushes and tall weeds. From time to time the sound of something familiar would come to the ear, creating the impression of the famous "Buck" whistling "buckwhistle."

As we drew near we saw a score of guinea fow, the regular dark-gray variety, with whiteness on each feather. The birds didn't go far, so we employed our time taking them from their place to place. In doing so we saw a lot of quail, somewhat larger than our Bob White. These, too, were very tame, and would let you approach very near. The boys got out their revolvers and blazed away, but no one had shot cartridges, nothing came to bag.

The utter absence of any venomous snakes or insects made us all the more anxious to hunt for those birds next day, and we tried all that evening in Santiago to get a decent shotgun. More than ever did I mourn for my new Baker hammer gun lying in its case in New York city. How I should have enjoyed a glance along that "cylinder" Damascus right loaded with "E. C." smokeless No. 8 shot. No one cared to try Mausers on the game, and as no amount of persuasion could induce Gen. Wood to loan his valuable double-barrel, we had to give up all thoughts of hunting. Capt. Brickett and the "Port Victory" doctor, McClintock, both vowed that their guns would be on board next trip, and I expect to hear from them soon.

The dogs in Santiago were mostly short-legged hounds with long ears. This I wondered at until I learned that the mountains are full of deer. There is a railway run back to the mines at Fimroz, 30 miles distant, where there is excellent deer hunting. The animals are similar in form and color to our deer, but are smaller. The hunting is excellent. They are killed by still hunting. Forest and Stream.

AN ESSAY ON DIARIES.

Little Johnny Tells What He Knows of Them.

A diary is a note book in which people write down things they see every day for a few years after. The only persons I ever knew to keep diaries a whole year were the stationers, who got stuck on them.

Schoolgirls are great on keeping diaries. I got hold of one one day when she wasn't looking and I don't know what she made me sicker—the stuff she wrote or the licking she gave me for reading it. There wasn't much in it, anyhow, except an account of the weather and the number of times the young man who calls on her kissed her. George asked her one night to let him see her diary, but she wouldn't, because the first part of it was all about Charley, the fellow what used to call on her.

Ma used to keep a diary until dad got hold of it and tore it up. I'll never forget the row there was in the house that time. Dad said she made a mistake in writing down the number of nights he came home drunk. But she proved it and then dad went and took the pledge. He kept it about as long as ma kept the diary—N. Y. A MYTH ABOUT "HE FLOOD."

Uniqe Account Given by the Lithuanians of Eastern Europe.

The Lithuanians, a people of eastern Europe, have the most unique of the myths concerning the flood. The god Pramanis, so the legend runs, saw that the world was full of disorder; that men were evil and were becoming ever worse. He sent, therefore, two giants, Wandu and Weijas (the water and the wind) to destroy all things. They wandered about in fury, crushing and burying everything in their way. Only a few men escaped them and took refuge on a high mountain.

Now, at this time Pramanis was sitting in his home in the heavens, and as he looked down toward earth to watch the giants in their work, he saw the few poor people crouching in terror on the mountain. He could not keep from pitying them, so he dropped a small amount of the heavenly nectar on the mountain near the people, and in it they took refuge.

When the giants finally reached the mountain, they saw the shell of the nectar coming from the heavens, and, respecting it, came not nearer. The waters finally subsided into the four seas and the little lakes and rivers, leaving the rest of the land. As soon as the people on the mountain saw they would again be safe they descended and scattered to various parts of the earth.

A single, very aged couple remained in that corner of the earth, they were most miserable because they had no children about them to cheer them and make easy their old age. Pramanis, again taking pity upon them, sent the rain, a message of mercy, and counsel, and showed them over the "bones of the earth." Long the aged couple puzzled as to the meaning of the god's message before they finally decided that the "bones of the earth" were their own children. They obeyed them, jumping, nine times, and the result was nine pairs of children, who became the ancestors of the nine Lithuanian tribes.—Leila G. Fish, in Minneapolis Journal.

SON BOSSES HIS FATHER.

Ben Lear, Sr., Private, Ordered Around by Ben Lear, Jr., Sergeant.

The only instance in the history of the federal army of a son being in command of his father is reported from Manila, where the Fifth Colorado infantry is stationed. In that regiment there are two Benjamin Lear. Lear, Sr., a man approaching 50, is a private in company C. Lear, Jr., aged 19, is a first sergeant in the same company. For once in his life the son is in a position to boss his parent.

There never was a more faithful man in the ranks than Private "Ben" Lear, sergeant of Co. "B" Lear, private. And there's no more wide-awake officer at Manila than "Ben" Lear, sergeant, son of "Ben" Lear, private. If it comes "Ben" Lear, Sr.'s turn to carry a little wood, draw rations from the commissary department or man a broom in cleaning out quarters, that person receives orders from his son to do it, and he obeys.

It rebelled he would no doubt go into the guardhouse just the same as if he were not the parent who is responsible for the first sergeant that gives the command.

Benjamin Lear, Sr., is well known as a printer in Colorado, and has also seen his day as one of the leading ball players of the country. Several years ago he was a member of one of the big circuit leagues and made good, earning for himself as a catcher and second baseman. He played in the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati teams.

His father and son got the war fever and both enlisted. The son, however, secured advancement first, and was made first sergeant. The father was admitted to the son's company at the latter's instigation, and they are as two boys together when the stern duties of the soldier are laid aside. They sleep and eat together and share each other's rations. They often have a "rough and tumble" together, and they play all sorts of pranks on each other. Mrs. Lear, wife of "Ben" Lear, private, and mother of "Ben" Lear, sergeant, lives at Cripple Creek.—N. Y. Journal.

Every Path Hath a Puddle.

The puddle in the pathway of most lives is a defective circulation due to a blood supply that instead of growing clear and strong like a mountain brook, is stagnant and impure. Puddles may be purified, however, and become limpid streams. That is what Hood's Sarsaparilla does with human blood.

It clarifies, purifies and strengthens the blood, and when this is accomplished, the vital organs, liver, lungs, kidneys, bowels, are all braced and invigorated. It never disappoints.

Dyspepsia.—It dissolves everything that clogs for years with dyspepsia. Nothing relieved me until I used Hood's Sarsaparilla and it made and kept me well. Can eat anything I wish. Port Chester, N. Y. J. H. O'NEIL.

Impure Blood.—Five years I suffered with impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me permanently. It also cured my father's blood. ALBERT E. CRAWFORD, Austin, Cal.

Erysipelas.—My little girl is now fat and healthy on account of Hood's Sarsaparilla curing her of erysipelas and eczema. It is our family medicine, as we all take it. Mrs. J. O. WILSON, Port Chester, N. Y.

OUR WAR WITH SPAIN.

Yes, brother, we have lately had a little affair with Spain. To help the struggling Cubans. And to avenge the blood of Maine.

First, we captured the Philippine Islands. Then took Porto Rico, too. Then the outlook for the Spaniards became most intensely blue.

Then we tackled him off the Cuban coast. And we sunk all his little toys. We bombarded, we routed him. And we made a fearful noise.

We chased him 'er Cuban tobacco fields. Till finally we upturned him. Then Uncle Sammy ordered him. And, my gracious, how he whipped him.

Yes, he walloped him around in the dust. And he rolled him in the mud. Then helped him up and brushed him by the hand. Then he took him by the hand.

We hired ships and conveyed him home. To his own beloved Spain. With a warning not to ever do it. With his Uncle Sam again.

Then, in a spirit of generosity, As a recompense for his licking. Trust twenty million dollars. To prevent his future kicking.

Thus to even things up all around. The honors all came to us. While the profits came the Spaniard's way.

In this insignificant little war. —H. C. WILSON, Levee, Ky., March 1, '94.

Good Winter Butter.

When the milk has been strained heat it till it crinkles on top, then place where it is cool, but will not freeze. When enough for a churning skm it and place the cream pot by the stove or other warm place to ripen. Churn with a temperature of 58 degrees. If the curd of milk is small, it is better to churn all the milk than to keep it over three days, as the butter and buttermilk will be better if the milk is too old. That the butter is good is shown by the fact that our customers take it in preference to creamery butter at the same price. These suggestions are given for those farmers' wives who do not have scientific appliances.

HUNTING NEAR SANTIAGO.

Plenty of Quail and Deer—Good Fishing in the Harbor.

As a member of the Sir Thomas Lipton war relief committee it was my fortune to pass about a fortnight in Santiago harbor, and I employed a portion of my time in looking up the game and fish. On either side of the Yellow Fever island there come in two small rivers, navigable in canoes for about five miles, when we reach the lofty mountains. The water is cool and clear, and quantities of fish could be seen. No one is taken by our party, on account of the lack of tackle. The bushy shores contained snipe, quail and guinea fow in abundance. No hawks were visible, but the air was dark with buzzards around about the city. The hunters all said that the buzzards did no harm to the game birds or their eggs, but were merely scavengers. The waters of the harbor are pretty sluggish, and the bottom is covered deep with green mud, but the sailors managed to catch some fish one day, including a big red snapper, which were served in the captain's cabin and pronounced excellent in the harbor of San Juan, Ponce and Santiago the game seemed fairly swarm. These fish ran from one to three feet in length. At night there were many large fish about, judging from the splashing.

One of the regulars of the game, Capt. Alexander, of the rough riders, went to San Juan hill on horseback, as there are no roads in that part of the country. While the captain was trying to find the way of Capt. "Bucky" O'Neil, of Prescott, A. T., one of his comrades who had fallen there, the rest of us wandered around in the mule trails, now nearly obliterated and grown up to bushes and tall weeds. From time to time the sound of something familiar would come to the ear, creating the impression that a farmyard was near. "Buck-wheel buckwheel!" was the cry, and as we drew near up went a score of guinea fow, the regular gray variety, with white spots on each feather. The birds didn't go far, so we employed our time chasing them from place to place. In doing so we saw a lot of quail, somewhat larger than our Bob White. These, too, were very tame, and would let you approach very near. The boys got out their revolvers and blazed away, but as no one had shot cartridges, nothing came to him.

The utter absence of any venomous snakes or insects made us all the more anxious to hunt for these birds next day, and we tried all that evening in vain to get a decent shot. More than ever did I mourn for my new Baker hammer gun lying in its case in New York city. How I should have enjoyed a glance along that cylinder Damascus right loaded with "B. C." smokeless No. 8 shot. No one cared to try Mausers on the game, and as no amount of persuasion could induce Gen. Wood to loan his valuable double-barrel, we had to get by with our old-fashioned Capt. Brickett and the "Port Victor" No. 8 shot. McClintock, both vowed that their guns would be on board next trip, and I expect to hear from them soon.

The dogs in Santiago were mostly short-legged, and very noisy. This I wondered at until I learned that the mountains are full of deer. There is a railway running back to some iron mines at Fimosa, 30 miles distant. The animals are similar in form and color to our deer, but are smaller. The flesh is excellent. They are killed by still hunting—Forest and Stream.

AN ESSAY ON DIARIES.

Little Johnny Tells What He Knows of Them.

A diary is a note book in which people write down things they're sorry for a few years afterword. The only persons I ever knew to keep diaries a whole year were the stationers, who got stuck on them.

Schoolgirls are great on keeping diaries. I got hold of sister's one day when she wasn't looking and I don't know which made me sicker—the stuff she wrote or the licking she gave me for reading it. There wasn't much in it, anyhow, except an account of the weather and the number of times the young man who calls on her kissed her. George asked her one night to let him check her diary, but she wouldn't, because the first part of it was all about Charlie, the fellow what used to call on her.

Ma used to keep a diary until dad got hold of it and tore it up. I'll never forget the row there was in the house that time. Dad said ma made a mistake in writing down the number of times he came home drunk. But ma proved it and then dad went and took the picture. He jerry rigged it up, as ma kept the diary—N. Y. World.

The Mistress—Now, what do you mean by bringing that policeman in the kitchen?

A MYTH ABOUT THE FLOOD.

Unique Account Given by the Lithuanians of Eastern Europe.

The Lithuanians, a people of eastern Europe, have the most unique of the myths concerning the flood.

The god Pranzimas, so the legend runs, saw that the earth was full of the game and fish. On either side of the world, two giants, Wandu and Wejase (the water and the wind) to destroy all things. They wandered about in fury, crushing and hurrying everything in their way. Only a few escaped them and took refuge on a high mountain.

Now, at this time Pranzimas was eating nuts in his home in the heavens, and as he looked down toward earth to watch the giants in their work, he saw the few poor people crouching in terror on the mountain. He could not keep from pitying them, so he dropped a shell of one of the heavenly nuts on the mountain near the people, and in it they took refuge.

When the giants finally reached the mountain in their course of destruction, they recognized the shell as coming from the heavens, and, reflecting, came not nearer.

The waters finally subsided into the four seas and the little lakes and rivers, leaving the rest dry land. As soon as the people on the mountain saw they would not be safe they descended and scattered to various parts of the earth.

A single, very aged couple remained in that country alone, but they were most miserable because they had no children about them to cheer them and make easy their old age.

Pranzimas, again taking pity upon them, sent the rainbow, as a message of mercy, and counseled them to jump over the "bones of the earth." Long the aged couple jumped as to the meaning of the god's message before they finally decided that the "bones of the earth" must mean the rocks.

They obeyed them, jumping nine times, and the result was nine painted children, who became the ancestors of the nine Lithuanian tribes.—Leila G. Fish, in Minneapolis Journal.

SON BOSSES HIS FATHER.

Ben Lear, Sr., Private, Ordered Around by Ben Lear, Jr., Sergeant.

The only instance in the history of the federal army of a son being in command of his father is reported from Manila, where the Fifth Colorado infantry is stationed. In that regiment there are two Benjamin Lear, Sr., a man approaching 50, is a private in company C. Lear, Jr., aged 19, is a first sergeant in the same company. For one in his life the son is in a position to boss his parent.

There never was a more faithful man in the ranks than Private "Ben" Lear, father of Sergeant "Ben" Lear. And there's no more wide-awake officer at Manila than "Ben" Lear, sergeant, son of "Ben" Lear, private.

If it comes "Ben" Lear, Sr.'s turn to carry a little wood, draw rats from the commissary, or sweep the man a broom in cleaning out quarters, that person receives orders from his son to do it, and he does it. If he rebelled he would no doubt go into the guardhouse just the same as if he were not the parent who is responsible for the first sergeant that gives the command.

Benjamin Lear, Sr., is well known as a printer in Colorado, and has also seen his day as one of the leading ball players of the country. Several years ago he was a member of one of the big eastern leagues and made a great name for himself as a catcher and second baseman. He played in some great games with the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati teams.

Father and son got the war fever and both enlisted. The son, however, secured advancement first, and was made first sergeant. The father was admitted to the son's company at the latter's instigation, and they are as two boys together when the stern duties of the soldier are laid aside. They sleep and eat together and share each other's rations. They often have a "rough and tumble" together, and they play all sorts of pranks on each other. Mrs. Lear, wife of "Ben" Lear, private, and mother of "Ben" Lear, sergeant, lives at Cripple Creek. —N. Y. Journal.

To Cure the Deaf and Dumb.

King Oscar of Sweden and Norway, always ready with his purse in the promotion of scientific research, appears to have rendered a great service to mankind by having, at his own expense, a deaf and dumb man to be treated under a certain system of massage of throat, ears and the surrounding parts of the head, advocated by a great Swedish surgeon, with the result that the lucky patient has begun to speak and can hear.

GREENBACKS or Government Money.

At close of our Civil War in 1865, there appeared in the London Times the following:
"If that mischievous financial policy which had its origin in the North American Republic during the late Civil War in that country, should become indurated down to a fixture, then that government will furnish its money without cost. It will have all the money that is necessary to carry on its trade and commerce. It will become prosperous beyond precedent in the history of civilized nations of the world. The brain and wealth of all countries will go to North America. THAT GOVERNMENT MUST BE DESTROYED OR IT WILL DESTROY EVERY MONARCHY ON THIS GLOBE."

The famous Hazard circular, to capitalists in New York, and the Buell Bank circular to United States Banks, both emanating from London, and the fabulous corruption fund raised in England and Germany, estimated at $1,500,000, were the agents that secured the closing of our mints against gold.

The "walk into my parlor" policy of England, during and since the Spanish War, is the latest evidence of English Diplomacy in shaying the destiny of the United States Government.

Notwithstanding the famine price of wheat, the Spanish War, and fabulous expenditure of money by our government during the past year, gold has increased in value eleven per cent, and all other values decreased in the same proportion.
For a thorough understanding of the money question, or silver issue, the Cincinnati Enquirer has uniformly given evidence of its ability to teach, explain and produce all facts and truth. It is a paper that ought to be read by all classes with pleasure and profit.

RULES FOR DUELING.
Some Old-Time Directions for Conducting an Affair of Honor.

To the subjects of Queen Victoria it is, happily, almost a thing of the past, and Mr. Illustrated, but 65 years since dueling was sufficiently in vogue to induce an anonymous writer to publish a book "containing much useful information" "historically dedicated to Daniel O'Connell, Esq., M. P., and James Silk Buckingham, Esq., M. P., as "entertaining the opinion first promulgated by the immortal Flagstaff, of happy memory, that discretion is the better part of valor."

The author advises "all my countrymen who abroad to use the pistol instead of the sword when they have the choice of the weapon, as the balance of killed and wounded is now much in favor of the French, who upon the termination of the late war, amused themselves by occasionally splitting some half dozen of our traveling young fashionables before breakfast." The recommendation "Tuesday, in Oxford street, as the maker of the best dueling pistol looks," care in the selection of a stock which fits the hand comfortably, and to "eschew 'saw blades'." Barrels should be "one inch long, and half rifled, which considering that throughout his volume he poses as a man of the strictest honor, is puzzling, for he admits that a wholly rifled pistol is considered an unfair weapon, and therefore one appearing to be rifled should be substituted.

On "the chances" he writes: "Many a poor, long-armed, straggling fellow has received the coup du (sic) coup, (or fatal stroke) because he has been in existence had been known how to protect his person in the field," the necessary protection consisting in standing sideways and drawing in the stomach. "Should the party be hit," presumably because he could not draw in his stomach, "he must not feel alarmed." This seems difficult, as a man with a bullet in his stomach can hardly be expected not to display some little natural anxiety, or, as it is admitted later, "a shot in the digestive organs must be particularly annoying to a bon vivant." To adhere to his advice is "the old method of fighting—back to the adversary, and discharging over the shoulder." "The chances of a man's being killed are about fourteen to one; and of his being hit, about six to one."

He arrives at this conclusion by dividing a man's body into parts. Therefore he says: "As in only three of these a wound would prove mortal, the chances are three to one against his being killed, and five to one against his being hit; that is, however, he hastens to add, "provided his antagonist has never read my work; if he has, the case may be different!"

The combatant is told "not to allow the idea of becoming a target to make him uneasy, but to treat the matter jocosely." He is to laugh away the evening over a bottle of port, and play a rubber of whist, but he must avoid talking to excess or taking "any food that tends to create heat, because 'bilious obstructions are not seen either distinctly or correctly.'" This would rather be a valid reason for getting as bilious as possible; a man with an attack of jaundice should be invisible and able to blaze at his antagonist in perfect safety. If he cannot sleep on retiring to rest he is to read Byron's "Child of Harod"; his servant is to call on five, and give him a glass of port of coffee; then he is to smoke a cigar, and "on his way to the scene of action" he is to take a brandy and soda, as a most "grateful stimulant and corrective."

No wonder our author recommends him at this point to "take a glass of port, and if he dies, he is to go off with as good grace as possible!" On the other hand, if he hits his antagonist, he is to take off his hat to him and express regret.

A challenge is not to be in rhyme, such as "a certain poetical, brandy-loving major general of marines" wrote to a brother officer who ran off with his wife:
"Wounded on the flesh a surgeon's skill may heal,
But wounded honor's only cured with steel."

An Irishman is not to be chosen as second, for nine out of ten have such an innate love for fighting they cannot bring an affair to an amicable adjustment, and the Irishman is to be used to prevent the affair coming to a serious issue. Other advice is for the second to take care his principal is not inconvenienced by the sun, and to get his antagonist with something dark behind him, when it will be much more easy to hit him.

As may be inferred, the author holds by dueling, for—"The man who falls in a duel and the individual who is killed by the certainty of a coach are both unfortunate victims to a practice from which we derive great advantages. It would be absurd to prohibit stage traveling because occasionally a few lives are lost by an overturn, and unless we were to prohibit the destruction each other they might live to a patriarchal age, and multiply so rapidly that the soil would soon be insufficient to supply them with food." It is a paper that ought to be read by all classes with pleasure and profit.

TAKEN BY AN ENGLISHMAN.
Spanish Town Surrendered to a British Captain by Mistake.

Like his military colleague, Capt. Leo, Capt. Paget's sympathies with the American army during the recent war were unqualified, and the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record, like his colleague, he used the word "war" both in conversation and in his official reports, regardless of the laws of neutrality, and it is an actual fact that he accepted the surrender of one of the United States in Porto Rico in the capacity of a United States soldier. I venture to repeat the story at the risk of Capt. Paget's reputation as a neutral. With a party of newspaper correspondents, he accompanied the advance of one of the American columns of invasion. When they reached a place where two ways met there was an earnest controversy as to which was the right one. The general commanding took the road to the right, as advised by his scouts. Capt. Paget, with the stubbornness that characterizes many Englishmen, took the road to the left, because, according to his map, it seemed the shorter and best one, and so it turned out to be.

The correspondents, thinking they would have more fun with Paget than with the soldiers, accompanied him, and when they reached the town were astonished to find the alcalde, or mayor, and the members of council in dress suits, with white ties and gloves and silk hats, standing in the middle of the road, ready to surrender to the Yankee invaders. As Capt. Paget was the only member of the party who wore a uniform, the mayor mistook him for the commanding general, and supposed that the correspondents composed his staff. Nobody knew enough Spanish to explain the mistake, and the newspaper men insisted that Paget should take advantage of the opportunity and accept the surrender. He did so with great reluctance, and, as an officer of her majesty's navy, received the surrender of a Spanish town. Fortunately the advance guard of the army arrived in a very few moments, and Paget was relieved of his embarrassment, although the boys still insisted that he captured the town.

BARBARITIES IN COREA.

Horrible Cruelties Indicted Upon an Ex-Interpreter.
A correspondent of the Novor Vremya, writing from Seoul, gives a terrible description of the crimes perpetrated in Corea by the "anti-Chinese" party, who since the departure of the Russian fleet, and drill instructors, have wreaked their vengeance by means of vile deceit and barbarous cruelty on the former Korean interpreter or dragoman of the Russian embassy, who was instrumental in safe-guarding the removal of the emperor of Corea to the safety of the Russian mission. His wife and a number of other Koreans were brutally tortured in order to force them to testify to a trumped-up charge against him of poisoning the emperor's coffee. The ex-interpreter himself, Tim Khunuk, was compelled to confess a crime of which none knew him to be innocent, on a solemn promise that he would receive a merely nominal punishment. The motive was to shield the real criminals among the high officials of the government, but these latter then broke their pledge and had the ex-interpreter condemned to the most brutal form of capital punishment. First of all his tongue was cut out in front of his face, and then he was executed by the guillotine, and after execution the body was mutilated and made sport of in a public place in the most savage and disgusting manner.—St. Petersburg London Times.

A New Anecdote of Padewski.

Padewski, while in this country, became such an idol of the matinee girls and of women generally that he was overwhelmed with requests by mail for his autograph and photograph. One day, when on his western tour, a messenger entered his private car and handed him a letter from a prominent society woman of a large western city. Those who saw it say it was excessively lavish in adjectives expressing admiration for the great pianist and his art, and wound up by requesting him to "lock of hair," and enclosed a stamp for return postage. When the laughter of the Padewski party had subsided, his secretary proceeded to indite a reply, which ran as follows: "Dear Madam M. Padewski directs me to thank you for the compliment which it affords him much pleasure to comply with your request. You fail to specify whose hair you desire, and to avoid error he has secured a sample of hair from the hair of my valet, his valet, his two cooks and his waiter, together with a small portion from a cat and a mattress belonging to M. Fullman, proprietore of the coach de luxe which he occupies. I have the honor to be your obedient servant."—N. Y. Journal.

THE RING OF LOVE.
Story of a Proposal and How It Was Received.

"Will you marry me?" he asked. "Certainly not," I replied. His sudden question was very embarrassing, and had to say it quickly. I was not sure that I should not marry him, but I could not accept him off-hand like that, especially as he fired his proposal at me like a ball from a mauler rifle in the hands of a Spaniard in ambush. I must meet a defense, if only to gain time for parley. So I answered, sharp and short: "Certainly not."

"But you shall!" he declared. "Who will compel me?" I answered, defiantly. "I shall," he replied. "How will you do it?" I inquired. Now that was a mistake. My curiosity had gotten the better of my judgment, and like that of a general who makes a false move, my position was weakened. He took instant advantage of it.

"I shall not tell you," he said, loftily. "But you shall!" I declared. "Who will compel me?" he answered, loftily. "I shall," I replied. "How will you do it?" he asked. "We move in a circle," I observed. "Like my love," he rejoined. "You mistake," said he. "In that it has no end," he replied. "And like mine," I suggested. "Pray explain," said he. "It has no beginning," I answered, triumphantly. "You mistake," said he. "In what?" asked I. "The beginning is there, but cannot as yet be seen."

"Like my love again," said I, foolishly, not seeing the admission. "I thought so," said he. "I shall proceed to make it visible." With that he took from his pocket a ring set with a single diamond. "What would you do?" I asked. "I would break the ring," said he. "To what purpose?" I asked. "To discover the beginning," he replied.

"But you would also discover the end," I said. "Then I shall not break it," he answered, placing the ring upon my finger. "It may serve to better end." "But I spoke true," said I, "my love hath had no beginning. It came as the light in the morning comes." "As it hath had no beginning, let us pray that it have no end," said he, with fervent tenderness. "With all my heart," I whispered. "I shall never let you break it." ENGLISH SCHOOL ETIQUETTE.
Unwritten Rules for the Elton Boy—Some Specimens.

Every school has its own etiquette, and a slang peculiar to itself. At Elton no boy in the lower part of the school may carry his umbrella furled, and at Winchester the same convention holds good, together with an Englishman who had previously undertaken to learn all about the Siberian prisons without even learning a word of Russian, we began to cross-examine Kennan. To our astonishment, he not only spoke excellent Russian, but he knew everything worth knowing about Siberia, and a short time after had been acquainted with the greater proportion of all political exiles in Siberia, and we besieged Kennan with questions: "Where is So-and-so? Is he married? Is he happy in his marriage? Does he still keep firm in spirit?" It was soon evident that Kennan knew all about every one of them.

When this questioning was over, and we were preparing to leave, I asked: "Do you know, Mr. Kennan, if they have built a watchtower for the fire brigade at Chita?" Stepanik looked at me, as if to reproach me for abusing Kennan's good will. Kennan, however, began to laugh, and I soon joined him, amidst our hearty laughter we tossed each other questions and answers: "Why, do you know about that?" "And you too?" "Build?" "Yes, double estimates!" and so on, till at last Stepanik interfered, and in his most severely good-natured way objected: "Tell us at least what you are laughing about." Whereupon Kennan told the story of that watchtower. The Chita people wanted to build a watchtower, and collected the money for it; but their estimates had to be sent to St. Petersburg. So they went to the ministry of the war, but when they came back two years later, fully approved, all the prices for timber and work had gone up in that rising young town. This was in 1862, while I was in Chita. New estimates were made and sent to St. Petersburg, and the story was repeated for full 25 years, till at last the Chita people, losing patience, put in their estimates prices nearly double the real ones. These fantastic estimates were lately considered at St. Petersburg, and approved. This is how Chita got its watchtower.

Creeping Consumption

Do not think for a single moment that consumption will ever strike you a sudden blow. It does not come that way. It creeps in very slowly.

First, you think it is a little cold; nothing but a little hacking cough; then a little loss in weight; then a harder cough; then the fever and the night sweats.

The suddenness comes when you have a hemorrhage. Better stop the disease while it is in its infancy.

You can do it with

Goebel on the State Central Committee from the State-at-large and the time and place for holding the State Democratic convention. Olle James was unanimously chosen to succeed Mr. Goebel. The time designated for holding the convention was June 14, and the place the city of Louisville. Saturday, June 17th was designated for holding county and legislative district conventions for the purpose of selecting and instructing delegates to the State convention. The representation will be one vote for each 100 votes cast for W. J. Bryan. For the committee on arrangements for the convention in Louisville, J. W. Freeland was made the committee.

The full delegation was evidence of the interest among Democrats on the vital party questions. Mr. Urey Woodson, of the Owensboro Messenger, read the following communication from National Committee in regard to raising funds for 1900: Already raised is in the National Treasury $30,000 from small contributors at a dollar a month for twenty-five months. At Owensboro he raised $1,300; at Lebanon, $450; at Paducah, $800; at Frankfort, $1,400; at Henderson, $500, etc. He said Mr. Dunlap had raised $1,000 at Louisville, and expects to make it $10,000. He asked the Committee to assist in the work.

NICKELL.

At West Liberty on Friday, March 10, 1899, Mrs. Mary W. Nickell died after a short sickness, aged 67 years. She was the widow of Miles W. Nickell, and mother-in-law of Maj. W. J. Seitz. She was postmaster of the town, having been appointed during this administration.

Capt. P. P. Bunch has bought of Ed. C. O'Rear his lot on College street, where the fire occurred on Sunday morning, March 5. This will add materially to Capt. Bunch's already pretty home.

Joe Ramsey Pardoned.

Monday, Judge Rodney Haggard and Mrs. Joe Ramsey went to Frankfort to see Gov. Bradley, and, if possible, secure Mr. Ramsey's pardon. They were completely successful and before night he was a free man. The Governor gave the following reasons for his action:

"Applicant, a man of hitherto excellent character, committed forgery, his wife paid off most of the debts, in order to do which, she mortgaged her home. Applicant is hopelessly crippled in both lower limbs, and besides is in very delicate health, so much so, that imprisonment would result in his death. On recommendation of the grand jury that indicted the petit jury that convicted, all of the county officers and many good citizens, a pardon is granted."

This act of Gov. Bradley meets with general approval. While there was little excuse for the crime, the punishment has been and ever will be great. Loss of position, self-respect, social ostracism, and above all, the shame and sorrow he has brought to one of the best and most loving wives ever given to men, is a greater punishment than iron bars and prison garb. It is her devotion and self-sacrifice that has redeemed his sin, has changed public opinion and made his pardon possible. All honor and glory to such a wife—Winchester Democrat.

If fair weather sets in, do not think the world is burning up. The smoke will be from burning tobacco beds.

But little plowing has been done. We have heard of no tobacco beds having been burned.

One week ago the thermometer registered zero and below. On yesterday morning it was above freezing. Grass in the yards is appearing and some buds are swelling, and the indications are favorable for spring.
